

1997 Pegasus Award<sup>1</sup> winner: Best Science Song.<sup>2</sup> Kathy Mar's performance on mp3.com<sup>3</sup>
 Here is where the mild-mannered hacker takes off his disguise and stands revealed as a wizard of great power—because, you see, there is a world where magic really works. . .

Am C
 Beside the world we live in
 G C Em
 Apart from day and night
 Am
 Is a world ablaze with wonder
 Em Am
 Of magic and delight

Like a magic crystal mirror,
 My computer lets me know
 Of the other world within it
 Where my body cannot go.

Dm
 You can only see the shadows
 Am G Am
 Of electrons on a screen
 Dm Am
 From the world inside the crystal
 Em Am
 That no human eye has seen.

The computer is a gateway
 To a world where magic rules
 Where the only law is logic
 Webs of words the only tools

Where we play with words and symbols
 And creation is the game
 For our symbols have the power
 To become the things they name.

refrain

Now you who do not know this world
 Its dangers or its joys
 You take the things we build there
 And you use them as your toys.

You trust them with your fortunes,
 Or let them guard your lives.
 From the chaos of creation
 Just their final form survives.

refrain

Call us hackers, call us wizards,
 With derision or respect,
 Still our souls are marked by something
 That your labels can't affect.

Though our words are touched by strangeness
 There is little we can say.
 You would only hear the echo
 Of a music far away.

refrain

<sup>1</sup><<http://electricpenguin.com/ovff/pegasus.html>>

<sup>2</sup><<http://electricpenguin.com/ovff/oldpeg.html>>

<sup>3</sup><http://artists.mp3s.com/artists/22/kathy\_mar.html>